

Jeremy Frew

Jeremy Frew has been an active in post-secondary education for over 17 years. During his career, he has worked in student services and academics at both private and public institutions. Jeremy's passion is creating new opportunities for traditional and non-traditional students.

Jeremy previously served as Assistant Dean of Community College Programs at Siena Heights University where he was responsible for the oversight and expansion of five degree completion sites located on Michigan community college campuses. Jeremy's responsibilities also included ensuring alignment of the 3 + 1 curriculum with the community college partners while maintaining the flexibility to award non-traditional students credits for work experience and credentials.

Jeremy worked as the Dean of Occupational Education at Jackson College from 2012-2017. Currently, he serves as the Vice President of Student Services at Jackson College, as the Chair of the Executive Committee for the Jackson County Cradle to Career Network, on the Michigan Works! Southeast Workforce Development Board, and as a member of the Jackson Community Foundation, Grant Committee.