

Kim Gamez

A Born Entrepreneur. For the past 20 years, Kim has founded businesses in both the U.S. and Mexico.

At 19, Kim used her high school graduation gift money to put a down payment on her first real estate investment. At 20, she and her husband, Hugo, opened a restaurant, The Crazy Cowboy, in downtown Jackson. At 30, they opened a second restaurant and continued to invest their “taco money” to grow their real estate portfolio.

After a successful restaurant career, Kim knew there was lots to learn about business and enrolled in Jackson College to pursue a bachelor's degree as part of a unique business administration and marketing program offered with Siena Heights University.

Most recently, she was featured in Forbes, The Today Show, CNN and has been dubbed “Tech Start Up Darling” with her latest endeavor, Mi Padrino, an international marketplace, with over 3 million users.

Kim continues to be a very active real estate investor. She and her husband own and manage a multimillion-dollar portfolio including over 120 rental units in and around Jackson County with their company Gamez Properties.
